DAILY LEADER

A FLIGHT IN THE DARK.

My father was an engineer before me and gave up a tolerable business in a most experienced drivers on the line.

The life of an engine driver, when once you have got over the dissgreeableness of being, while on duty at least, in a chronic alway, employed to run cither the ex-press or mail trains-a task for which none but the best drivers were selected. You must understand that all of this took lace more than twenty years ago. The 'irefly was running, on the week in quesion, between Mellingshail and Ripping-curst—the former, as you are aware, being one of the largest m nufacturing towns in the northern counties, and the headquarters of the lines on which I was employed.

Molligshall has two lines of railway running into it—one from the north, and one from the southeast; both of which lives meet at a junction about haif a mile from the station, and run their trains between these points on rails common to the two.

The Rippinghurst mail started at eleven er, but our instructions were to have ev-rything in readiness a quarter of an hour fore starting, and to run the engine from the shed on to a space lion used for the purpose just outside the yard, there to await the signal-bell which amounced that the main line was clear and then run ack to the platform, and take up our train As we drove slowly up to our waiting place Sam was in the habit of dropping of the engine most evenings, to have a few animutes gozzip with a friend of his, a pointsman, whose tastes, in common with Sam's ran on large gooseberries and small dogs, and as I came back past the points man's bex, on my way to the station, in anood night, lesp blithely on to the engine pull on his great coat, the a shaw round his throat, and prepare for the long dark journey before him. At the point where the Firelly took up her position, waiting for the signal, the line on the one side was pen to the fields while on the other were everal wharves, opening on to an adja-ent canal, beyond which lay the town of Mellingshall with its thousand lamps, I had driven up to the waiting-place one ld, autumn night, dropping Sam, as usu l, at his friend's the pointsman's box, and d just lighted my pipe, thinking to have a quiet smoke for ten minutes before the bell should ring, when I was startled by the sudden appearance, close to the engine, of two gentlemen—for if not gentlemen they were dressed as such—who seemed aloet as if they had sprung from the ground o quiet had been their approach, so unexected was their appearance, "Railway nobs by pipe out of sight in hot haste. "Probthough, to come prying about a fellow's on-gine at this time of night, trying to find out something sgainst him. They'll fine poor Sam if they find him off his perch."

They were both well wrapped up, for the night was chilly; and the slim one carried a small leather case in one hand—judging by that dim light it might be either a disch box or a small portreanteau. You are writing here to take cut some train, young man?" said the stout gentle men interrogatively. "Yes, sir-the mail for Rippinghurst." "And that starts, when?

"In twelve minutes, sir, from the plat-"Ay, just so." He began to walk slowly cound the Firefly with his hands behind m, looking at her admiringly at every cint of view, and talking to me all th

"I suppose your engine is coked and watered and ready for the journey ?" "And how far do you run before taking fresh water?

"We always take in water at Merryville, irty-eight miles from here. We have to ay these or four minutes, on ac-ount A she letter-begs." "But supposing you had no train behind you, how many miles could you ran to-night, say at the rate of forty miles an hour, before being obliged to stop for coke

"About seventy miles, sir." "About seventy miles! Just so. Really these steam-monsters seem to me the meet wonderful inventions of this or any previous age: ' and, as he said there wor mounted coolly on to the engine. Then I felt more cartain than ever that he must be director or some great railway functionary; while the slim gentleman with the is patch box, standing so quietly on the and, besting his chort with one hand to keep himself warm, was probably a clerk

r amanuencia. No sooner had the stout gentlemen chambered up beside me, than he com-menced another cross-lire of questions, and CLEVE AND, OHIO. | made me explain to him the method of working the engine. I showed him how to start her, how to step her, how to put on the brake, and sound the whistle. He expressed himself as being immensuly gratihad and when his list of questions was exhausted, called to the slim gentleman to get up beside us, in order that he might explain to him some more interesting point than common.

The slim gentleman, still holding the dispatch-box carefully, had hardly complied with this request, when the bell sounded which summoned me to the station, and I at once started the engine.

"We will ride as far as the platform with ou," said the strut goutleman, watching my movements attentively.

The ordinary programme of proceedings was as follows: on hearing the bell, to run the engine slowly forward to the second ointeman's box, where a man was in waitng to turn her on to the main line, after mning on which for a few yards, she was reversed, and run back, tender first, into the station, taking up Sam Preston at the first pointsman's box on the way in. On the present occasion as soon as I heard the bell, I sounded my whistle as a notice to pointsman number two; and on eging his green light exhibited, ran the ngine forward over his points till we were on the main line. I was just about to reng back into the station, when the stout man speks to me.

"How far is it from here to the junction where the line of Rippinghurst separates itself from the north line?" "About half a mile, sir,"

" And what means has the pointeman at that junction of distinguishing one set of trains from the others, or of knowing on to which line they ought to be turned "His tables inform him at what time ach train ought to arrive or depart, in adlition to which ail engines going north give two distinct whistles, while those go-ing south to Rippinghurst and other places whistle three times before reaching the function, and thus notify the pointsman bich route it is intended they should take."

"Just so; two whistles when you go orth, and three when you go south. Le oment est arrive! Dearcely had the stout gentlemen, who as standing behind me, utted these words when I felt myself seized suddenly round the throat with an iron grasp, while my head was wrenched violently back; and those days I should certainly have said when I got back to Mellingshall, I durst not then pause to contemplate. It was true that I was being carried sway against my will; but I had been wrong in the first pisca, in allowing a stranger to get on to the engine, and so render it possible for any one to usurp the command placed tem-perarily in my hands. The mail would be elayed; and when it was discovered that had absconded with the engine, they could put me down as a lunatic at once. But a few minutes more would bring us to Fallowdene station, at which place I would ly, and prove my innece at the same time. "This sort of thing may seem a pleasant game to you," I said, turning to the stont stranger; "but it's decordly unpleasantly away with the engine-stolen it, in fact, away with the engine—stolen it, in fact, and haid yourselves open to an indictment of the ground, to felony. preparation, and better than any pills, powders or nostraus. Being liquid, their action is direct and positive, rendering them a reliable, speedy and ourtain specific for the cure of all obstructions and suppressions of Nature.

Their popularity is indicated by the fact that over 100,000 bottles are anunally sold and communed by the ladies of the United States, and every one of them speak in the strongest terms of praise of their great merits.

They are speedily taking the place of every other emale remedy, and are considered by deniers, connmers, physicians, and all who know aught of bem, as the surest, safest and most infalliable preparation in the world for the cure of all female complaints, the removal of all obstructions of Nature, and the promotion of health, strength and regularity.

Explicit directions, stating when they may be sed, and explaining reasons why and when they should not be used without producing, results contrary to the course of Nature's chosen laws, will be found carefully folded around each bottle with the signature of Dr. JOHN L. LYOS, without which none are genuine. They are prepared at the inberstery of JOHN L. LYON, M.
